The Rise of Crowdfunding Investment

• Popular tool to fund start-up projects and small businesses by pooling small monetary contributions from many individuals, typically through online platforms and social media. Growth took off in 2008, when credit was limited during the economic downturn. After collecting data on 1,250 active crowdfunding platforms (CFPs) worldwide and undertaking significant further research, the results reveal that CFPs raised $16.2 billion in 2014, a 167% increase over the $6.1 billion raised in 2013. (Source: Massolution’s 2015 Crowdfunding Industry Report).

• In 2015, the SEC adopted rules to permit companies to offer and sell securities through crowdfunding. As of May 16, 2016, companies can use crowdfunding to offer and sell securities to the investing public. Because of the risks involved with this type of investing, however, there is a limit in how much can be invested during any 12-month period in these transactions. The limitation depends on net worth and annual income.

• ESG investors can get involved in crowdfunding through platforms such as Calvert Foundation’s new online community investment portal Vested.org, Solar Mosaic’s platform for solar energy investments and Impact Assets’ donor-advised Giving Fund for charitable investments.
Secretary of Labor Thomas Perez announced that the Administration rescinded a 2008 DOL bulletin on Economically Targeted Investments that discouraged investors from considering environmental and social factors in the companies and funds in which they invest. Secretary Perez supports fiduciaries that engage in sustainable and responsible investing, a mission that US SIF has advanced throughout its history.

This new interpretive bulletin notes that "fiduciaries need not treat commercially reasonable investments as inherently suspect or in need of special scrutiny merely because they take into consideration environmental, social, or other such factors."
